While you are reading this letter....

A truck driver picks up food donations and delivers it to our warehouse.

The food is weighed, sorted, and stored by our team and volunteers.

Moisson Outaouais distributes the food to its affiliated organizations.

And somewhere in the Outaouais, a family receives enough food to fill their fridge.

Hello,

The holiday season is a time filled with light, music and get-togethers. Yet, for many families in our region, it is overshadowed by a worry: will we have enough to eat till the end of the month?

Sophie and Jonathan, the parents of nine-year-old Émile, and six-year-old Léa, are familiar with this worry as they juggle with work, school, homework, lunches and cooking supper. They carefully plan their meals, watch for discounts, and budget to the last cent. Yet, despite all their efforts, numbers don't add-up anymore lately. After paying the rent, transportation, electricity…, there is less and less to fill the fridge.

> "Knowing that our children will enjoy the magic of the holiday season is priceless."

So, Sophie and Jonathan do what so many parents would do in such cases: they deprive themselves so that their kids want for nothing. A smaller plate, a purchase delayed, an expense postponed: anything that will allow them to hold on a little longer.

No parent should have to make such choices.

Unfortunately, this scenario is a reality for more families than we might think. In the Outaouais region, families account for over 36% of households asking for food assistance. Sometimes, sacrifices to make ends meet are simply not enough, and a little help is welcome.

And that is where your generosity makes a true difference. This year, your donation may enable parents like Sophie and Jonathan to enjoy the festive season with one less worry and a little more abundance around the table.

Your outstanding support as a socially conscious business allows us to answer more than 108,000 requests for food assistance each month in the region. Thanks to your generosity, Moisson Outaouais is able to recover and distribute sufficient food supplies to its 52 affiliated organizations, in order to meet the growing needs of our community.

Our heartfelt thanks for supporting families in our region.

Sincerely,

Joseph Aghaby, President of the Board of Directors
